A 91 year old black gentleman told me of a tiime in the late 30's when the dairy industry would not let the new margarine industry sell its product if it was yellow. Margarine was introduced as a white pasty product and another company sold a small package of food color to change it to yellow so it would look like butter.

Sounds like AM and FM think they own the airwaves and they have a franchise on information that is vital to the TAX PAYING citizen of this country. I would suggest letting NAB just get better at what they are doing and stop trying to clip XM and Sirius' wings.

I travel a good bit and don't have time to wait for 20 min. to find out weather and traffic information in a town where I don't know the AM and FM program trends, but I do rent a car that has the SAT radio feature so I can be an informed driver in a city that I am not sure what and where I am going and what is around the next corner.
